Why whisky investment can be a way forward

In uncertain times, it can be challenging to decide what makes a good investment. However, Scotch whisky is an increasingly popular alternative asset.

London Cask Traders specialises in sourcing rare and sought after casks for its clients and building whisky portfolios for investors of all sizes. It handles the process from start to finish, from purchase and storage in secure HMRC-approved government-bonded warehouses, to arranging full insurance and sale.

Removing common barriers like access to distilleries, storage and regulation, the company makes this a more accessible investment. From a first consultation with a dedicated account manager, each client's investment ambitions are considered throughout, including selling options after a recommended five to eight years (or longer).

Visit londoncasktraders.com to find out more.

As with any investment, returns are not guaranteed, and the value of investments can go down as well as up.
